

I do not believe the FCC should implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections. Prior to the implementation of Indiana's law I would receive, at times, 30 phone calls a week. Sometimes I would receive one an hour if I did not answer the phone. Since the implementation of Indiana's law, I receive maybe one a month, if that. Indiana's law has made the quality of my home life better, because the phone is no longer a constant, unwanted interruption. If businesses and charities wish to contact me, they are able to do this through either the mail or email, it does not have to be over the telephone.

Sincerely,
Jennifer A. Miller
